Getting Ready for Business. [Washington special.]

The treasury department bought out of the bullion fund, on Monday last, enough silver, at 53% pence, to run all the mints for 30 days, even if the silver bill becomes a law immediately. This purchase was made in anticipation of the passage of the silver bill and the temporary rise in silver. It is believed at the department that the rise in silver will not be permanent but that the price has will not be permanent, but that the price has been put up by speculators, with the idea that the government would have to enter the market and buy largely at once, which is

A News reporter was this morning shown a sample of corn flour by R. C. J. Pendleton, of the board of trade committee on the Paris expositson shipments from this place, which is on its way to France. The reporter wanted to know why more of that stuff was not made, that it looked like it would make bread. "Gracious goodness!" exclaimed the exhibitor, amazed at such ignorance, "don't you know that nearly all the low grade flours in the country are half corn?"

A communication from the local commis A communication from the local commission of the international prison congress to be held at Stockholm, Sweden, on the 29th of August, has been received by the governor, requesting that this state be officially represented at the congress by one or more delegates. The assembly will be composed of members drawn from all parts of the civilized world, and it is hoped that the meeting will result in much good to the cause ing will result in much good to the cause of prison discipline and reform.

GREENLEY WILL HANG.

The Murderer of Ida Kersey Given the Extreme Penalty.

A Verdict Returned at Three O'Clock-How It was Received—The Scene in Court.

Prosecutor Heller did not conclude his argument in the Greenley case until 11 o'clock this morning. He attempted no oratory but contented himself with a recitation of the facts brought out in evidence, which were presented without flourish and without heat. Judge Buskirk ther charged the jury, defining murder in its various legal phrases. He, too, refrained from anything like buncombe, giving simply a cold anslysis of the law that must govern the jury in making up a verdict. The jury retired at 11:20, and from that time until 3 o'clock the court room was crowded by a mixed audience waiting for

At ten minutes after 3 o'clock the jury, headed by Bailiff Vanstan, filed into the court room. The audience closely scanned the countenances of the jurymen, endeavoring to read the verdict in their inces. The bailiff was under the closest scrutiny, being better known to the habitues of the court and his closely compressed lips and an unusual whiteness in his face was construed into a judgment that the jury had given the extreme penalty of the law. The prisoner was brought into the court room at five minutes after 3 o'clock and while his face plainly expressed anxiety as to the finding it. showed no tremor as he ast in quiet anticipation of the result. After the calling of the roll of the jury, the clerk advanced and received the verdict, which he read in a clear voice. It wast "We, the jury, find the defendant guilty of nurder in the first degree, as charged in the indictment, and that he suffer death therefor." A strong hum of approval went over the audience the court room and galleries being densely packed, which was at once repressed by the gavel of the judge.

the court room and galleries being densely packed, which was at once repressed by the gavel of the judge.

The crowd waited with craining necks to see what would next be done, and while they lingered the sheriff shut and locked all the outside doors to the court room. Then he massed his bailiffs and grasping the prisoner directed his steps towards the door of the judge's private room, through which passage was made to the great hall, and from thence to the jail. The maneuver was executed before anybody had a chance to remonstrate. Greenley said not a word while oa the way to or from the jail. He was pale almost to whiteness, and his eyes were cast to the ground. He did not manifest the slightest emotion, but maintained the demeanor of a stoic. When the court room doors were thrown open the crowd surged out and several hundred gathered about the jail, but dispersed in a short time. The colored people seemed overjoyed at the verdict, which they regard as a just retribution.

COURT ROOM NOTES.

Just before the jury came in Judge Buskirk rose, and addressing the audience said that the verdict of the jury must be received in silence; that no demonstrations of any kind would be tolerated, either of approval or disapproval, and that the first person indulging in such demonstrations would be summarily dealt with by fine or imprisonment. This promise of the judge had a good effect.

The verdict was received in silence, and for a period of 30 seconds after the clerk finished reading it the dropping of a pin on the floor could have been heard. Judge Buskirk was greatly excited, and when he asked for the verdict his voice was scarely above a whisper. COURT ROOM NOTES and when he lasted for the vertice his voice was scarely above a whisper.

The foster father of Greenley's victim was doing a thriving business in the criminal court room today, selling photographs of Ida Kersey while the audience were waiting the verdict of the jury. After the verdict was given his sales were so rapid he could hardly make change. His cloud seemed to have a silver lining.

The jury stood 6 to 6 on the first ballot—6 for the death penalty and 6 for imprisonment for life. In all about a dozen ballots were taken, and at ten minutes before three o'clock a verdict was agreed upon.

The Cincinnati Enquirer of this morning thus details an adventure that befel a bank cashier of this city:

Last evening, between six and sevin o'clock, special officer Tom Moran, on duty at the Plum street depot, noticed the action of a well-dressed, middle-aged min which he thought were rather suspicious. He was seen to button-hole soveral "greenies" on the depot floor, as if he were trying to make a trade of some kind. Final' ly Moran accosted him as he was talking to one at hem, and found that he was endeavoring to sell him a pass over the Indianapolis and Cincinnati railroad to the former point for $3. This was evidence sufficient, Moran thought, to bounce him, which he did. The stranger was highly indignant at being arrested, and refused decidedly to go with the officer. He was collared, however, and started in the direction of the Third street station house, but fought and struggled so vigorously that Moran was compelled to call upon officer McCarty for assistance.

After arriving at the Third street station house ascarch of the prisoner revealed the fact that he had between $900 and $1,000 th his clothes and several passes over the C. C. C. & I. railroad, which read, "Pass J. S. Kennedy and one to Indianapolis and return; void if presented after March 3ist."

The one which he was endeavoring to sell to the countrynan read the same way, but this was on the I. & C. railroad, and was signed by M. E. Ingalls, general passesner agent.

Kennedy, for such he claimed to be, says he is a banker, and resides in Indianapolis. A document found among his private papers states that J. G. Kennedy is the owner of $4,200 worth of bank stock in the Hoosier capital. Before he was taken to his cell he managed to get possession of the Ingalis pass, and when he thought he was unobserved he put it into his mouth and tried to swallow it. He was promptly choked and made to give it up. The man may be all right, but his actions in the depot and in the station impressed the officers with the belief that he is a clover "cropk." He is short of stature, will weigh, perhaps, 160 pounds, and wears sandy whiskers all around his face.

Mr. Matthews—I am still of the same opinion as when you saw me before—that the president will veto the bill.

The president received the silver bill this afternoon. It will be discussed in the cabinet to-morrow. While the pressure to induce him to sign it increases, it is the belief of those friends who are most intimate with him that he will veto it. ## THE DAILY NEWS.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1878.

A Challenge.

THE bona fide circulation of The Indianapolis News largely exceeds that of any other daily in Indiana. It numbers from 1,000 to 1,500 more than the daily Journal, and it openly challenges that paper to join in a complete test by sworn experts, and The News will pay the expense of the trial.

Put Up or Shut Up.

No level-headed business man can fail to see that this (The News's) pretense about "a general circulation through the state" is a fraud.—[Morning Journal.

The News adds to the challenge above the following propositions: It will pay these sums if its assertions are not true. If they are true the Journal is to pay like sums, the money to be divided between the three orphan asylums of the city, or given to any charitable organization agreed upon:

$500 that The News has a larger daily circulation in the city of Indianapolis than the Journal:

$500 that The News has a larger bona fide daily circulation in the state of Indiana than the Journal, this excluding exchanges, "dead-heads" and the free list generally;

$500 that The News has a larger total daily circulation than the Journal.

That is about the size of it. That was what the Indiana democratic platform meant. It was constructed to take in the nationals, the greenbackers, the workingmen and everybody else.

Ben. Butler's Boston collector, Simmons, is at Washington lobbying for a reappointment. To put it on the ground of policy, there seems to be no call on this administration to endorse Benbutlerism, which was the cause of Simmons's first appointment by Grant.

SENATOR LAMAR is quoted as saying that, if the Mississippi legeslature censures him for his vote against the silver bill, he will resign his seat in the senate. And Senator Lamar ought to do nothing of the kind, any more than a judge should yield to popular clamor against a verdict. As long as he is true to his oath of office and to himself, he should stick.

ALL the reasons that exist for the president signing the Bland bill, are as strong for the veto. If the silver men can pass it over his head so neatly and speedily it will become a law with very little more delay than if he signed it, and there exists no cause why he should become part or parcel of it. It is the silver men's funeral and they should be allowed to furnish the

As the depreciated silver dollar comes into circulation there will be some debts liquidated at a loss to the creditors; but the latter will take care to protect themselves for the future by demanding gold notes, or refusing to lend at all. An incidental benefit may arise by making credit more difficult, and thus reducing indebtedness. But the process of liquidation will be expensive.

CONGRESSMAN SOUTHARD, of Ohio, is out with a constitutional amendment to try the three-consul system instead of a presidency for the executive branch of the government. The sort of system the first Napoleon kicked into a military dictatorship and from that into an empire. Financial heresy seems to be infectious for other subjects and to be the point d'appui for theories as wild and useless as those of the scholastics of the middle ages.

THE house committee report on the Chinese question is temperate and reasonable. It recommends no interference with Chinese already here, but instructs the president to look to such abrogation of existing treaties as shall militate to the future welfare of the country, which would be threatened by an unlimited immigration of the Mongolian. This is a grave subject, but one that must be dealt with and it may as well be approached now, slowly.

It is a curiosity of politics what different persons a pope and a cardinal are. The most liberal of the red jackets becomes as stiff-necked as a statue so soon as he dons the white robe. Cardinal Pecci, noted for clear headed good sense, it is now said since he has become Leo XIII. will do as the liberal cardinal did who became Pius IX, advocate bourbonism and keep up the fiction of being prisoner in the Vatican. It is to be hoped he will not change, but perhaps it is just as well for Italian unity

THERE are no surface indications yet in eastern affairs. Roumania is protesting vigorously against any treaty which looks toward robbing her of Bessarabia, but she will probably be robbed. Russian diplomacy is like Catholicism, it never abates one jet or tittle of its demands. It will temperize and equivocate, but it always comes back with a passive inflexibility to its first claims. The Russian advance has stopped at San Stefano, ten from Constantinople, where miles final peace conditions will be signed. England objects to Russia's term to Turkey, which demand that Egypt's tribute shall go toward payment of the indemnity. A perfectly proper objection on England's part, as it would not only use up Egypt's resources and cause her to default on British obligations, but could be used as a pretext by Russia to foreclose for any non-payment. The conference it is said will be held in April. Russia will evidently attempt to make the treaty with Turkey the basis of the conference, while the other powers will insist on going back to existing treaties—those of 1856 and 1871.

Marion County Nominations.

It is political practice to hail every election with the announcement that it is the most momentous event in history, and that consequently nominating conventions must have the fate of nations before their eyes in making choice of candidates. We mention this to give notice that we are aware of that puffy platitude when we assert that the contest in Marion county will be one of national significance. This comes from the fact that the next legislature chooses a United States senator, and the political complexion of that legislature largely depends on Marion county. The democrats in their state ticket have left Marion county interests their weakest spot, but they may remedy this by their county convention, and in this they have the advantage of action after the republicans have committed themselves, for they do not hold their county convention until June. Thus republicans may be certain that every part of the ticket they nominate will be subjected to the searching scrutiny of a bitter political opposition, and the mistakes they make will be used for lessons by their opponents to make themselves strong on the weak spots of their enemy. The necessity for this caution extends to every part of the ticket, not merely to legislative nominations, but to nominations for county offices. The ticket should not be handicapped in . even its smallest office. The election will be a very close one, and the republicans can not afford to begin their campaign with apologies. Men with "records" will have to be scrutinized very closely. An unblemished record of previous service in an office is to a certain extent a kind of prima facie evidence of fitness. But if there happens to be the slightest defect in it, though it may not be moral or material, it hurts and may be fatal ply "lied" out of election in 1872. It will also be to republican interests if they are wary of "chronic candidates," either from oft-repeated election or oft-repeated attempts at it, men who are tangled in combinations and hampered by the weight of numerous promises. As a general rule it will be well to look out for fresh material. Party lines lie very loosely, and claims for "services rendered" while they may seem important to managers are of very little consequence to the people. It is the best man who will get the most votes at the next election in this

It is told to Stanley's credit that when he arrived at the Atlantic coast after that terriable journey through Africa, he paid every man to the uttermost farthing, and the rela tives of those who had perished in the march, just what he had promised them at the outset, and sailed with them around the whole coast of Africa to bring them back to their homes as he had promised. What if Stanley had made them take 91 cent dollars on pay day? or treated them as we have treated the Indian, what would the world think of him?

American Credit in France Shaken.

[New York Tribune.] John Munroe, the American banker at Paris, now in this city was asked yesterday what effect the attempt to remonetize the what elect the attempt to remonetize the silver dollar produced on American secur-ities in France. "I left Paris about four weeks ago," said Mr. Munree, "and at that time there was great excitement in financial circles there over this attempt. It has shaken American credit in France and in-duced holders of United. States bonds to sell them out as soon as they could, and prevented others from buying these bonds which were becoming very popular. For some timepast French investors have been somewhat reluctant to buy American rail-road bonds, many of which have been bad investments, but the people cling to United States securities, confident that the United States government would faithfully redeem its promises. Now faith in these securies is also shaken."

Mr. Munroe could not make an estimate of the amount of American bonds sold by people in France on account of the silver movement, as large numbers were sent to England. The bad effects of the silver agitation would continue for a long time in France.

Railroad Accident in Virginia.

In a railroad accident Sunday night, on the Richmond and Fredericksburg railroad, W. C. Mainwaring, of Baltimore, was killed. Frederick Faulkner, of Richmond, had a leg amputated below the knee; L. F. Donnelly, Charleston, West Virginia, had both legs crushed and amputated, and John W. Aldridge, of Fredericksburg, received injuries, the character of which is not known. No other ware of which is not known. No others were seriously hurt. Mainwaring was the private secretary of President Robinson, of the Richmond, Frederickisburg and Potomac railroad company. The accident was caused by the sleeping coaches becoming detatched on a down grade, and when the locomotive stopped the detached car crashed the rear car of the stationary train, catching the four men standing platform, with the result stated.

The Democratic Platform. [Springfield Union.]

There is one good thing about it, and that is that the Indiana republicans will be forced to take higher ground and to put a little honesty and decency in their platform when they come to frame it. while the Indiana people are pretty loose in their views on national finances and public credit, we are not yet willing to believe that they will ratify this villainous democratic platform when they come to vote upon it.

A Gang of Mollies Unearthed.

Sheriff Guffey, of Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, has succeeded in unearthing a gang of Molly Maguires, who have been operating for three years past in the vicinity of Irwin's Station, on the Pennsylvania Central railroad. Up to the time these men began work, the relations between miner and employer were of the most amicable disposition, but shortly after their appearance the men became dissatisfied, and this feeling increased until it culminated in an open outbreak. The miners culminated in an open outbreak. The miners struck, and during the lockout many instances of open violence occurred. The town of Irwin's has been fired several times. Once more than half of it was laid in ruins. These fires were attributed to carelessness at the time. The sheriff obcarelessness at the time. The sheriff obtained a clue last week, and succeeded in interviewing one of the suspected, who made a full confession. This man, Parfitt, says the gang numbered twelve or fifteen men; that they were regularly organized, and held periodical meetings in a hotel near Irwin's. They organized and conducted the strikes, and during one of them the Mollies attacked a man named Fowler. who was at work Fowler, who was at work in the mine, but were driven off after an exchange of shots. On the same night they burned the Tipple check-houses and the wagons of the Bald Eagle mines. They have caused all the fires, and during the July riots in this city they burned hay stacks, cut telegraph wires, and killed a young man named Carroll, whose body they placed on the railroad track, where it was discovered at daylight, mangled and torn. Parfitt also brought to the sheriff another of the gang, who on being cornered up, corroborated Parfitt's story. The rest of the Mollies getting wind of the disclosure, fled precipitately, and detectives were at once started in pursuit, and were close on them at last accounts. Great excitement exists in the village and surrounding country.

Congressional.

In the senate Mr. Conkling presented a petition from James Gordon Bennett asking congress to aid him in seeking new discoveries at the north pole. He had purchased the arctic vessel Pandora, and intended to man and run her at his own expense, but desired that the vessel should carry the American flag. Mr. Wallace introduced a bill to provide for carrying ocean mails in American steam-ships. Referred. This is the bill prepared by the export convention. A large number of other measures were introduced and referred. An amendment to the army bill, doing away with commutation of forage and allowing infantry officers on duty requiring them to be mounted shall receive the pay and emoluments of cavalry officers of like grade, was passed.

In the house bills were introduced for the free coinage of the silver dollar. Also, to utilize the product of the gold and silver mines, and provide for the issuing of certificates for gold and silver bullion deposited in the mints. To reduce the pay of navy officers, and reduce the number of such officers in line and staff.

I called to thee, and yet thou wouldst not stay,
But turbulent, and with thyself contending,
And torrent-like thy force on pebbles spending.

Thou wouldst not listen to a poet's lay.

Thou wouldst not listen to a poet's lay.

Ihoughts, like a loud and sudden rush of wings,
Regrets and recollections of things past,
With hints and prophecies of things to be,
And inspirations, which, could they be things,
And stay with us, and we could hold them fast,
Were our good angels—these I owe to thee.

Mere our good angels—these I owe to thee.

And thou, O River of To-morrow, flowing
Between thy narrow adamantine walls,
But besutiful, and white with waterfalls,
And wreaths of mist, like hands the pathway showing;
I hear the trumpets of the morning blowing,
I hear thy mighty voice, that calls and calls,
And see, as Ossian saw in Morren's halls,
Mysterious phantoms, coming, beckoning, going!
It is the mystery of the unknown
That fascinates us; we are children still,
Wayward and wistful; with one hand we cling
To the familiar thing we call our own,
And with the other, resolute of will,
Grope in the dark for what the day will bring.

Young Napoleon was present. He has: smirking, almost expressionless face, hand-some in regularity, but that is all. If he amounts to much in this world, it will be a wonder. He is, I believe, a painstaking, hard working student; but he has not re-ceived a heritage of talent from his father, unless I am greatly mistaken. Perhaps however, he will, as a North Carolina gir once told me of her sweetheart, "be a pow-erful smart man when he spreads."— rage he had kicked his wife to death. His own story, when cross-examined by Judge Davis, was this:

I am a hard-working man. I have always done my beat to support my wife and my family. I have five children. One is dead. God knows I loved my wife and my children. I sometimes drink. She sometimes drank. My work calls me out at 4 o'clock in the morning. I went out at that hour that morning, and at half-past twelve; I had nothing to do until half-past three. I drank a glass or two in the off-time. three. I drank a glass or two in the offtime, and went again to work.

After my work, I met a friend.

We drank some lager, and I went with him to a place where I had some whisky. (Judge Davis here closely crossexamined him.) I think it was the northwest corner of Tenth street and Third avenue. It may have been Eleventh street and Third avenue. There were three of us together, and we had three drinks.
Then I went up to inquire for a friend at Edward Hagan's place, at the corner of Fourteenth street and Third avenue. He was not in, but I felt ashamed to go out without calling for something. In all I had 10 or 12 drinks of lager beer and four drinks of whisky before I got home. I think when I got home I found my wife lying on the floor, seeming drunk, and lying on the floor, seeming drunk, and said, "Is it this way again?" I know I loved her. I am 32 years old, and my wife was about the same age. She was a good wife except for this one fault. My oldest child is under 10 years old.

Stanley Described.

[Paris letter.]

He is short, being not more than five feet five in hight, and weighing now, I believe, 140 pounds, which is thirty pounds more than when he left Africa, but indomitable courage and persistency are written in every line of his face. His feature of the line of his face. tures are finely cut, his hair, which used to be black, is now prematurely gray; his rather deep set eyes are dark and piercing, and now they are restless, turning quickly from side to side, as if he were watching for an attack from concealed enemies. He seems to be constantly preoccupied, and when he is spoken to answers only in monosyllables. In reply to questions regarding his discoveries, and what he has been through, he says yes or no as long as that is pessible, then when neither word will serve he refers the interlocutor to his book saying "that will tell all about it." In fact, he has the appearance of being a little dazed, like a man who has been a long time in a dark room and then is suddenly led out into the bright, glaring sunlight.

Rande in the Penitentiary.

A more fiendish face than his, with the eard off, no human eye ever rested upon. The lower jaw is heavy set, and the chin protrudes an inch almost beyond the lower ip. The mouth is small, and would be hapely were it not for the slightly drooping corners, in each of which athousand devils linger. The cheek-bones are prominent, and the bulgy forehead acquires hideous-ness from the absence of the "cowlick" that used to stand up from it. The eyes are sharp and restless, and the teeth, which are bad and broken, show through the lips demoniacally when he speaks. Corporate horror that he was with hair and b full grown, without them he is hideous and frightful. No man could look upon that face without a feeling of antipathy.

The Cloud in the West.

[New York Tribune.] Let us not delude ourselves with the fond belief that there is nothing worse in store for us than this amended silver bill. We have to deal not merely with the vag-aries of this congress, but with a terrible uprising of popular ignorance and passion. It derives here and there an appearance of respectability from its alliance with certain mistaken economists, honest bimetallists who sincerely believe in the justice as well as the expediency of coining a light-weight collar. But these men, who were once the ostensible leaders of the movement, have already been pushed aside, and the demagogues are coming to the front with the red flag.

Familiar Talk.

[New York World.] Mr. Hendricks is a most conciliatory statesman. He deprecates "sectional con-troversies," and therefore tenderly entreats all the rest of the country to avoid such controversies by doing whatever the "great west" may think fit to demand! We used to hear something of this sort before the late civil war from the Toombses and Wigfalls. But if their accents were more imperious, it must be remembered that they insisted upon the rights of property as they understood those rights. Whereas if they understood those rights. Whereas if Mr. Hendricks and Mr. Bland rightly interpret the demands of the "great west," the "great west" desires to see everybody to whom it owes anything compelled to take 90 cents and call them a dollar.

Only One Way.

A thousand roads to prosperity have been tried by various people in various ages since the dawn of civilization, but only one has ever been found safe and easy for any people which sought to be both free and secure, and that lies through respect for plighted faith, for just weights and measures, for upright judges, and for the recorded experience of mankind. Any which in a civilized country, makes light of these things may reign for awhile as mobs reign, but it can not reign long, for even the social instincts of the rac fight against it.

Billiard Tournament.

Several citizens of Indiana, who have long viewed with alarm and contemplated with regret the decline of the noble industry of billiards, have decided upon a state trournament as the best available means to restore the languishing pursuit to something of its former favor, the noble game having been neglected for the idiotic and pernicious 15-ball pool. The final arrangements were made at a meeting held yesterday, and the tournament will take place at Washington hall March 18 to 23 inclusive, and will be participated in by P. A. Byers, Lafayette; Bussey, Garrett, Carney, Hawkins and Morris, Indianapolis; Frank Hopkins, Renselaer; Capron, lis; Frank Hopkins, Renselaer; Capron, Plymouth. ### LOCAL POLITICS.

How The Situation Looks to The News.

The Cadidates and ? beir Relative Strength-Some Guess Work-Ward Primaries.

The News yesterday published a list of the names mentioned in connection with the legislative race in this county and there is little to add save the positive refusal of Mr. Abromet to let his name go before the convention and a public expression of willingness on the part of Mr. Edward King to listen to the call of the people if the people should conclude they want him.

FOR SHERIFF.

The interest in the race for nomination to the county offices is wide spread and deep. There is good timber from which to choose There is good timber from which to choose candidates for every place. For sheriff there are only three candidates, viz: John T. Pressley, the present incumbent, John G. Pendergast, and John L. Hanna. It will be Pressly against the field, with Hanna second choice and Pendergast third. Pressley's friends are confident but his competitors are waging an aggressive through uphill fight. It looks very much as though Pressly had the inside track and a long lead.

TREASURER.

Samuel Hanway, present incumbent, S. C. Hanna, of Hess & Hanna; Thomas Schooley, of Franklin township, Capt. W. R. Clinton, of Warren township and H. Kerr, of Washington township are the candidates for treasurer. Mr. Hanway is not making such an active canvass as the exigencies of the situation would' seem to demand but will mass considerable strength. Clinton and Schooley are werking industriously and "smart ones" think the industriously and "smart ones" think the race will be between these two. Mr. Hanna will show up in the convention with a good many votes and perhaps unexpected strength. Mr. Kerr is not much spoken of.

BADLY MIXED.

Nobody can pretend to even guess what the result of the race for auditor will be. The candidates are Dr. Wm. H. Wishard, present coroner, Wm. A. Pfaff, I. N. Pattison, Charles W. Tutewiler, J. C. Adams, Frank W. Hamilton, and Wm. H. Schmitts. Dr. Wishard will be likely to come into the convention with a good country backing and a few wards; Mr. Pfaff is working his claim for all it is worth and is considered a strong man. I. N. Pattison will have a formidable following, but does not seem to gain much ground. J. C. Adams is pegging along, and Charles Tutewiler looks for an energetic support from city and county. Frank Hamilton has some showing, but he started in late and travels solely on his merits, which are of the first order. It would be difficult to make a bad selection from the list.

THE CLERKSHIP.

John Reynolds, Moses G. McLain, Dan. M. Ransdall, J. W. Armstrong and James N. Sweetzer are the candidates for clerk. Armstrong relies on his country strength. The fight seems to lay between Reynolds and Ransdal, though should there be a demand for a compromise candidate or a dark horse, McLain will be found there or thereabouts. One of the closest observers in the county thus quotes the relative strength of the candidates on the first ballot: Reynolds, 85; Ransdall, 80; McLain, 55; Armstrong, 50; total, 270. Reynolds thinks he will get in on the first ballot: Rarsdall counts on 100 votes at the very lowest on the first ballot and Armstrong on about the same number. It would seem that some of them must be mistaken as it would take 500 votes to enable the aspirants to verify their estimates and there are only 270 delegates. Of the two leading candidates Ransdall has probably the most reserved strength. THE CLERKSHIP. eserved strength.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEY.

For prosecuting attorney, John B. Elam, John A. Henry and William Brown are the most prominently mentioned. Mr. Elam, by reason of his connection with county politics, has the widest acquaintance and the best show for nomination.

CORONER AND COMMISSIONER. The candidates for coroner are Dr. W. P. Bailey, Dr. J. A. Sutcliff and Dr. W. H. Hornaday.
Only one commissioner is to be elected this year, viz: the one from the third district. orman, present incumbent is a candi-re-nomination. His competitor is date for re-nomination. Moses Allen of Decatur.

THE JUDICIARY.

THE JUDICIARY.

Three superior court, one civil circuit and one criminal court judge are to be elected. For the criminal judgeship the names of James E. Heller, present prosecutor, W. W. Woollen, J. N. Scott, Chass Ballenger and W. D. Tobin have been mentioned; for the civil circuit the names of L. C. Walker, Prosecutor Adams, of Hendricks councy, J. T. Lecklider, J. L. McMasters, and for the superior bench, Daniel Howe, D. V. Burns, H. C. Newcomb, Col. James B. Black and S. Blair. Col. James B. Black and S. . Blair.

THE TOWNSHIP OFFICES.

On the Center township ticket the offices On the Center township ticket the offices of trustee, assessor and five justices of the the peace will-figure most prominently. For trustee, W. S. King, present incumbent, Joseph English, G. W. Alexander, C. C. Heizer and Hugh Stewart are candidates. King will be likely to go into the convention with the strongest following. D. W. Brouse, Theo. McClure and W. H. VanBergen want the office of township assessor. To while the present of all the candidates for want the office of township assessor. To publish the names of all the candidates for justice of the peace and constable would it be necessary to issue a supplement.

Friday evening. For additional information it is stated that the basis of representation it is stated that the basis of representation is six delegates from each ward and 12 from each township except Center, north and south, from which 12 will be sent by each, making 270 delegates all told, or 136 necessary necessary to a choice. THE DEFAULTING CASHIER.

Judge Elliott Bules that the Johnson County Courts Have the Bight to Try B. T. Taylor.

Judge Elliott to-day ruled in the Taylor habeas corpus case beought by Sheriff Pressly against Dr. Evarts, superintendent of the insane hospital. The opinion is presented in full:

against Dr. Evarts, superintendent of the insane hospital. The opinion is presented in full:

Prossly, the sheriff of Marion county, petitions the court for a writ of habeas corpus directed to Dr. Evarts, and commanding the production of the body of Richard T. Taylor. It is alleged in the petition that Taylor was indicted in the Johnson circuit court for the crime of forgery, and that a warrant for his arrest came, in due course of law, to the hands of the petitioner. To the writ Dr. Evarts makes return that he is superintendent of the hospital for the insane; that Taylor is confined in the hospital; that an examination was had, under the statute, by two justices and a physician, and that Taylor was by such examiners declared insane and committed to the insane hospital. It is also stated on the return that Taylor is "still sick of his insanity and unfit to be discharged." To this return the petitioner files exceptions. I hold:

First. That the proceedings before the two justices are not conclusive, upon the question of insanity. The purpose of this proceeding is to cause the hospital authorities to receive the gerson declared insane; and the order issued by the justice is the warrant to the hospital authority for his detention and treatment but is not a conclusive adjucation of the question of insanity.

Second. The fact that one is in the custody of the officers of the insane hospital does not, of itself, prevent the indictment and arrest of such a person for the commission of a felony. The law does not inhead that the hospital shall be a temple of refuge to which accused criminals may flee for protection. The writs of our criminal courts ought and will reach a criminal in any institution in the state.

3. The Johnson circuit court has power to enforce its proceedings by punishing those who unlawfully resist, as for contempt, but the sheriff of this county having a writ which he is bound to serve may appeal to the courts of this county for aid and the fact that the Johnson circuit court having first acquired j

Aida at the Grand Opera House. Since the announcement that Strakosch

Since the announcement that Strakosch was to give us a season of opera with three prime donne, and that what is considered Verdi's masterpiece, Aida, was to be the initial performance, lovers of music have been in a gentle state of excitement, and as the time approached and the box sheet was opened it was evident that the management would risk nothing in coming to Indianapolis. No performance ever opened here with so lis. No performance ever opened here with so large a reserve. Every seat in parquette, balcony and parquette circle was taken last night, and nearly all in the circle above, while night, and nearly all in the circle above, while from the sky gallery opera glasses peered down upon the stage and the fortunate sitters below, showing that the usual patrons of what is alliteratively called the boot-blacks' balcony, had given place to more stylish occupants. It was a house to inspire an artiste to best endeavors. Not particularly fashionable, nor conspicuously dressy, but composed of the best elements of the city—leading members of churches, solid business men with their families, professional men, teachers their families, professional men, teachers, artisans and down the grade to the point where appreciation of operatic music ends. The house was well seated before the opera began, and less interruption than usual from late comers was noticeable.

late comers was noticeable.

Verdi has been accused of copying Wagner in writing Aida, and it certainly is written in a spirit of concession, at least, to the growing taste in that direction, but the author's individuality is stamped upon it in every part, and while the movement constantly reminds of Wagner, the elaboration, and the constant tendency to melody shows the genius of the writer of Trovatore, and its inconsistencies are condoned if not forgotten. The play was mounted in fine style. The gorgeous setting of some of the scenes, the barbaric splendor of the costumes, the weird nature of some of the choruses were in keeping with the story of the costumes, the weird nature of some of the choruses were in keeping with the story and location of the play. Kellogg as Aida, the unhappy captive daughter of the Ethiopean king, never acted with more consummate art and subtle spirit. She is in her fullest prime, and her glorious voice has all the freshness of its earlier years, and the power that full maturity brings. In the scene where she meets her father, and also that in which her passion is discovered and denounced by Amneris, daughter of the victorious king, she was grandly superb in voice and action, and the final scene of death in the sealed tomb with her lover, was the fitting climax of the evening. Cary had the more pleasing and not less intering character of the play, and one which she has created. The part has points which invite applause, and the artist worked them she has created. The part has points which invite applause, and the artist worked them up splendidly. She was called before the curtain three times in succession by the enthusiastic audience. Her singing and acting were simply magnificent. She is Kellogg's equal in every particular and the requirements of the piece gave her a decided advantage with a popular audience. She has always been a favorite here equal with Kellogg, and last night added to the list and ardor of her friends. Mr. Graff (Radames) has a fine voice, particularly in the upper tones which are clear as those of a bell. In his action and in some of his lower notes he disappointed expectation a little but bell. In his action and in some of his lower notes he disappointed expectation a little but made a good impression generally. Mr. Verdi's Amonastro was finely personated and in the scene where he entreats his daughter not to to desert her people in their misfortunes he showed strong dramatic talent. Mr. Conly is capable of better work than his part of Ramphis allowed him to display. He has a magnificent bass voice. Gottschalk as the king also played his role well. The chorus is a strong one and did its part in excellent manner, and the orchestra was not guilty of the besetting sin of orchestras.

guilty of the besetting sin of orchestra was not guilty of the besetting sin of orchestras, loudness, so often nor so offensively as is generally the ease. Mr. Behrens is one of the best of directors, and kept his force pretty well in hand. The ballet gave variety to the entertainment, and executed their brief but affective part in good test the entertainment, and executed their brief but effective part in good taste.

To-night Mignon will be played for the second time in this city, with Roze in the title role and Kellogg, Cary and the full force of the company in the cast. It will be the finest performance the opera house has ever witnessed, and the largest and best audience it ever contained. Finally, the too brief season will close to-morrow night with Faust, giving those who can not gain admittance to-night an opportnity to hear the new prima donna Roze, who bids fair to rival her two tuneful companions in the estimation of the public. She is young, very beautiful, and posesses a voice and histrionic genius of exceptional qualities.

Honest Poverty.

A delegation of the wives of the employes of the capital city rolling mill waited upon the township trustee this morning and preferred a request for aid. They state that for three weeks past their bread-winners have not received any wages, their pay being withheld, and that the company is also in arrears for pay for the month sof June and July last, beside other brick wages. These applicants are of a different class altogether from the usual frequenters of the township office, being honest hard working people whose necessities can not but be deserving of the sympathy, as they are in no wise occasioned by any fault of their own.

Merrill W. Kennedy this morning instituted suit for divorse from P. A. B. Kennedy, of Fawkner-MacIntire notoriety. The plaintiff charges him with the commission of varions acts of adultery, one instance of abortion and recites the manner in which she mortgaged her home to raise $1,000 to get him out of trouble.

An Accession of Virtue.
To the Editor of The Indianapolis News:

INDIAMAPOLIS, Feb. 26, 1878.

The Journal takes the position that candidates for legislative honors should not personally seek the offices. Why such ground is taken is a mystery, when every politician in the city remembers that the present proprietor of that sheet personally solicited and buttonholed every voter he could lay hands or, when he was a candidate for the nomination of senator some years since. They further recollect that the same sole proprietor also legged diligently for renomination, but the convention thought his mission fulfilled, and not only sat upon him, but danced juba upon the remains.

It is modern dectrine that any position worth having is worth working for.
